YATES WARNED TRUMP ON FLYNN BLACKMAIL FEARS

A former senior U.S. law enforcement figure said she warned President Donald Trump's White House in January about then-national security adviser Michael Flynn because she feared he could have been open to blackmail by Russia. Sally Yates, who was briefly the acting U.S. attorney general earlier this year, told White House counsel Don McGahn on Jan. 26 that Flynn had not been telling the truth about his contacts with Russia's ambassador to Washington. Yates, originally appointed by former President Barack Obama's administration, said she feared Moscow could try to blackmail Flynn because it also knew he was not being truthful about conversations with Ambassador Sergei Kislyak about U.S. sanctions on Moscow. REUTERS

BANKS TO MOVE 9K JOBS FROM UK DUE TO BREXIT

The largest banks in London plan to move about 9,000 jobs in the next two years, public statements and information shows, as the exodus of finance jobs starts to take shape. Last week Standard Chartered and JPMorgan were the latest global banks to outline plans for their European operations after Brexit. They are among a growing number of lenders pushing ahead with plans to move operations from London. Goldman Sachs chief executive Lloyd Blankfein said in an interview that London's growth as a financial center could "stall" as a result of the upheaval caused by Brexit. Thirteen major banks including Goldman Sachs, UBS, and Citigroup have given an indication of how they would bulk up their operations in Europe to secure market access to the European Union's single market when Britain leaves the bloc. REUTERS

SOUTH KOREANS VOTE FOR NEW LEADER

South Koreans go to the polls on Tuesday to elect a new leader, looking to move on from a corruption scandal that brought down former President Park Geun-hye and shook the political and business elite to the core. Unless there is a major upset, liberal Moon Jae-in — who calls for a moderate approach on North Korea, wants to reform powerful family-run conglomerates and boost fiscal spending to create jobs — will be elected president.

The vote will end months of leadership vacuum. Park was ousted on charges of bribery and abuse of power in March to become South Korea's first democratically elected president to be forced from office. She is in jail, on trial. REUTERS

FCC WEBSITE HIT BY ATTACKS PROPOSAL

The U.S. Federal Communications Commission said Monday that its website was hit by deliberate denial of service attacks after the telecommunications regulator was criticized by comedian John Oliver for its plan to reverse "net neutrality" rules. The attacks came soon after Oliver on Sunday urged viewers to file electronic comments with the FCC opposing the plan unveiled by

FCC Chairman Ajit Pai to reverse rules implemented under President Barack Obama that boosted government regulatory powers over internet service providers. Pai's plan faces an initial vote on May 18. Oliver in his HBO show "Last Week Tonight," owned by Time Warner Inc., urged viewers to use a website purchased by the show that takes visitors directly to an FCC page to file comments. REUTERS

Amid protests, GE breaks ground on new Boston headquarters

Gripes continue over tax breaks for General Electric as construction begins on their new offices.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Dogged protesters who say General Electric is getting unfair benefits from the state attended a groundbreaking ceremony for GE's new Boston headquarters on Monday morning.

Mayor Marty Walsh and Gov. Charlie Baker joined General Electric executives for the occasion at the site of the company's new soon-to-be headquarters, called Innovation Point.

But behind a nearby fence blocked from view by signs decorated with renderings of the new development, protesters opposed to the project tried to lift their placards and signs for Walsh, Baker and GE to see.

"I think they heard us. I think we broke through while they were trying to talk about all the wonderful things they're doing when the state of Massachusetts is facing a large budget shortfall," said Eli Gerzon of the Make GE Pay Coalition.

"Schools are getting cut, vital services are being cut, but we're giving hundreds of millions of dollars and free rent to GE," he said. "There's a lot of people in Boston and all of Massachusetts who could really use help with housing. GE, one of the most profitable corporations in the world, does not need it."

Innovation Point will be located on Necco Court between South Station and the Seaport District. The groundbreaking comes just over a year after the GE move was first announced. The company began searching for a new home after lawmakers in Connecticut, where its previous headquarters were located, passed a budget that increased taxes by $1.2 billion over two years.

That move drew protest from some Connecticut-based corporations, prompting GE to relocate, but the GE move has also drawn protest from some who believe Boston lured the business with perks.

The deal came with a reported $145 million in incentives, including $120 million from the state for building expenses and $25 million from the state for property tax relief when it was first announced in March 2016. It also included a provision potentially allowing GE access to the Fort Point building rent-free for 20 years.

Officials spoke about how the groundbreaking symbolized Boston's transformation over recent years to an innovation hub.

"Having GE, a company which could have gone anywhere it wanted to in the world to locate its corporate headquarters, choose to come here to Boston and Massachusetts was in some respects a wonderful statement about the work that's been done by so many people in the public and private sector over the course of several decades to make Massachusetts the kind of place that a company like GE would want to locate," Baker said.

The campus will be on 2.4 acres of land along the waterfront. Construction is expected to generate 1,500 jobs, and the new site will increase city taxes by $67 million over the next 25 years, Walsh said.

Why Viagra Is Failing Men

Soaring demand expected for new scientific advance made just for older men. Works on both men's physical ability and their desire in bed.

By Harlan S. Waxman
Health News Syndicate

New York – If you're like the rest of us guys over 50; you probably already know the truth... Prescription ED pills don't work! Simply getting an erection doesn't fix the problem" says Dr. Bassam Damaj, chief scientific officer at the world famous Innovus Pharma Laboratories.

As we get older, we need more help in bed. Not only does our desire fade; but erections can be soft or feeble, one of the main complaints with prescription pills. Besides, they're expensive... costing as much as $50.00 each

Plus, it does nothing to stimulate your brain to want sex. "I don't care what you take, if you aren't interested in sex, you can't get or keep an erection. It's physiologically impossible," said Dr. Damaj.

JAW-DROPPING CLINICAL PROOF

MADE JUST FOR MEN OVER 50

But now, for the first time ever, there's a pill made just for older men. It's called Vesele®. A new pill that helps you get an erection by stimulating your body and your brainwaves. So Vesele® can work even when nothing else worked before.

The new men's pill is not a drug. It's something completely different Because you don't need a prescription for Vesele®, sales are exploding. The maker just can't produce enough of it to keep up with demand. Even doctors are having a tough time getting their hands on it. So what's all the fuss about?

WORKS ON YOUR HEAD AND YOUR BODY

The new formula takes on erectile problems with a whole new twist. It doesn't just address the physical problems of getting older; it works on the mental part of sex too. Unlike the expensive prescriptions, the new pill stimulates your sexual brain chemistry as well. Actually helping you regain the passion and burning desire you had for your partner again. So you will want sex with the hunger and stamina of a 25-year-old.

THE BRAIN/ERECTION CONNECTION

Vesele takes off where Viagra® only begins. Thanks to a discovery made by 3 Nobel-Prize winning scientists; Vesele® has become the first ever patented supplement to harden you and your libido. So you regain your desire as well as the ability to act on it.

In a 16-week clinical study; scientists from the U.S.A. joined forces to prove Nitric Oxide's effects on the cardio vascular system. They showed that Nitric Oxide could not only increase your ability to get an erection, it would also work on your brainwaves to stimulate your desire for sex. The results were remarkable and published in the world's most respected medical journals.

THE SCIENCE OF SEX

The study asked men, 45 to 65 years old to take the main ingredient in Vesele® once a day. Then they were instructed not to change the way they eat or exercise but to take Vesele® twice a day. What happened next was remarkable. Virtually every man in the study who took Vesele® twice a day reported a huge difference in their desire for sex. In layman's terms, they were horny again. They also experienced harder erections that lasted for almost 20 minutes. The placebo controlled group (who received sugar pills) mostly saw no difference.

AN UNEXPECTED BONUS: The study results even showed an impressive increase in the energy, brain-power and memory of the participants.

SUPPLY LIMITED BY OVERWHELMING DEMAND

"Once we saw the results we knew we had a game-changer said Dr. Damaj. We get hundreds of calls a day from people begging us for a bottle. It's been crazy. We try to meet the crushing demand for Vesele®."

New men's pill overwhelms your senses with sexual desire as well as firmer, long-lasting erections. There's never been anything like it before.

VESELE® PASSED THE TEST

"As an expert in the development of sexual dysfunction, I've studied the effectiveness of Nitric Oxide on the body and the brain. I'm impressed by the way it increases cerebral and penile blood flow. The result is evident in the creation of Vesele®. It's sure-fire proof that the mind/body connection is unbeatable when achieving and maintaining an erection and the results are remarkable" said Dr. Damaj.

HERE'S WHAT MEN ARE SAYING

- I'm ready to go sexually and mentally.
- More frequent erections in the night (while sleeping) and in the morning.
- I have seen a change in sexual desire.
- Typically take 1 each morning and 1 each night. Great stamina results!
- An increased intensity in orgasms.
- My focus (mental) has really improved... Huge improvement.
- Amazing orgasms!
- I really did notice a great improvement in my ability.

HOW TO GET VESELE®

This is the first official public release of Vesele® since its news release. In order to get the word out about Vesele®, Innovus Pharma is offering special introductory discounts to all who call.

Suspect in South Boston killings ordered held at Monday arraignment

Bampumim Teixeira heard his charges from a hospital bed.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The suspect in the slaying of two doctors in their South Boston home has been charged with two counts of murder, according to the Suffolk County District Attorney's Office.

Bampumim Teixeira, a 30-year-old Chelsea man, was ordered held without bail Monday pending his trial for the killing of Lina Bolanos and Richard Field. His next court date is June 8.

Teixeira was arraigned while in a hospital bed at Tufts Medical Center on Monday afternoon by South Boston Municipal Court Judge Michael Bolden and Suffolk Chief Trial Counsel John Pappas, District Attorney Daniel F. Conley's office said.

He is at the hospital due to injuries stemming from the confrontation he had with Boston police at the doctors' home, 141 Dorchester Ave., Friday night.

Police found a backpack filled with jewelry at the apartment that is presumed to belong to Bolanos, Conley confirmed in a press conference Monday.

Police and SWAT responded to the 11th-floor apartment around 8:30 p.m. Friday night, where the couple was found dead. A friend of Field contacted police to report a possibly robbery in the couple's home after Field sent a cryptic text message, according to Conley.

Police found an intruder, later determined to be Teixeira, in a darkened hallway and shot Teixeira, believing him to be armed, Conley said. Earlier media reports inaccurately reported Teixeira first opened fire on police.

"Officers believed this intruder either pointed or drew a weapon on them in this darkened hallway," Conley said. "After speaking with [Police] Commissioner William Evans, we decided it was important to correct the record on this information as soon as possible."

Conley said the investigation is ongoing and nothing is being inferred from this information about the altercation with police.

Teixeira's record includes a pair of larceny convictions, according to the DA's office. In August 2014, Teixeira passed a note to a teller at a Boston bank demanding money. Two years later, in June 2016, Teixeira committed the same crime at the same location. After he was identified for that incident, he volunteered responsibility for the 2014 crime to officials.

Teixeira was recently released from prison after serving nine months for that crime.

Three days into the investigation, Conley said police had uncovered no information that connects Teixeira to Field or Bolanos. Police are also investigating a motive for the crime.

"Nor is there currently any evidence to explain why he would attack them so viciously at their own home," Conley said.

Field worked at North Shore Pain Management. On its website, a statement from North Shore Pain Management addresses the "tragic loss of Richard Field."

Bolanos was a pediatric anesthesiologist at Massachusetts Eye and Ear and taught at Harvard Medical School.

Meghan Markle got a full invite to Pippa Middleton's wedding

I'm really getting into the whole Prince Harry and Meghan Markle thing.

After weeks of confusion over whether or not the "Suits" actress would attend Pippa Middleton's wedding, The Telegraph and Express are now reporting

ing that Markle will be attending the full wedding as Prince Harry's date. Squee!

First, there were rumors that Markle wouldn't be invited to Pippa's wedding ceremony at all. Later, a source told People that Middleton was imposing a no-ring, no bring rule for the formal vow exchange. Now, Pippa and her soon to be husband, James Matthews, are making an exception for Markle, who isn't engaged to Harry. Well, not yet.

Prince Harry, 32, and Markle, 35, made their debut as a couple over the weekend. Afterward, they were caught making out. Royals, they're just like us!

And in March, a friend of the couple told Us Weekly that the two would be engaged by the end of the summer. "Meghan feels a move to London is inevitable," says the source. I'll take that with a grain of salt — but I'll take it, because I want these two to be together forever so badly.

Brad Pitt went to rehab, probably

Last week, Brad Pitt low-key admitted to being a hipster, and told the world he was sober. Now Page Six has learned that Pitt didn't do it all alone: The 53-year-old reportedly attended a special VIP facility for professional help.

Sources — could be anyone at this point, but my guess is Cruella DeVil from "101 Dalmatians," just 'cause — tell the site that Pitt attended meetings and therapy sessions at a discreet facility in a private residence. The center, designed for high-profile Hollywood figures, was set up by some wealthy anonymous person who suffered with substance abuse issues and wanted to help others in a similar position.

Well, it's certainly rude if someone from a private facility leaked this information. But it's great that Pitt is making moves to like, improve himself — even if it took Jolie divorcing him for him to get it together. Nevertheless, I am so proud of you, William Bradley Pitt. If you ever need a shoulder to cry on, be a dear and let me know.

Chrissy Metz is not here for your body shaming

Chrissy Metz, star of "This is Us," went to the 2017 MTV Movie & TV awards on Sunday. She wore a dark red, knee-length latex dress with ruffled sleeves. She looked quite chic.

Apparently, somebody somewhere didn't agree, though. Thankfully, Metz has perfect attendance at the Chrissy Teigen education center for clapping back, and has no problem dismissing any tomfoolery or negativity. Naturally, the 36-year-old actress took to Twitter to defend herself. "For the record, I wear what I want, when I want. News flash it's MY body. #thankstho."

This isn't the first time Metz has stood up for herself when it comes to her weight. But also? The fact is that she looked very good and that dress is fire emoji worthy.

So Bravo, Metz. Bravo.

David Spade & Naya Rivera are still happening

David Spade is a 52-year-old man most beloved for his role in "Just Shoot Me" — a television series that premiered 20 years ago. Naya Rivera is a 30-year-old who was in "Glee," and tried to start a feud with co-star Lea Michele, except Lea Michele couldn't be bothered. These two adults, who are proudly vying for the title of this year's second-most-unlikely couple, are still happening.

Us Weekly has photos of the two stepping out for a dinner date in West Hollywood over the weekend.

Rivera is wearing Marchesa, because of course she is. Spade is trying his best in a blue suit and tie, and it looks fine.

For what it's worth: Rivera and Spade originally met on the set of an upcoming comedy,

"Mad Families," a film written and starring Spade himself. Coincidence! Charlie Sheen also has a starring role, so you can guess just how classy this film will be.

That movie, much like this couple, is gonna be a hard pass for me.

Superheroes who deserve their own films

The summer movie season is here, and with it the usual glut of comic book movies. The genre won't be going away anytime soon, but eventually Hollywood will need more superheroes. Here are 10 that deserve their own stand-alone romp — and not just as part of some jam-packed installment. MATT PRIGGE

Domino

She's going to swing by for the "Deadpool" sequel, but the X-Force member sounds awesome on her own. She's a mutant who can change the probability of events happening. OK, that doesn't sound exciting on its face, but when combined with her mercenary skills — and cool makeup, with a big black circle over her left eye — she's like another Black Widow.

Arm-Fall-Off-Boy

"The Lego Batman Movie" made a decent joke out of unearthing untold obscure, nonsensical yet totally real villains, like Condiment King, who pulverizes his prey with squirts of ketchup and mustard. But heroes can be ridiculous, too. Take Arm-Fall-Off-Boy, an '80s DC creation who can tear off his arms and then beat people with them. Granted, this might be more suitable for a comedy. (Imagine Dax Sheppard doing it.) But a guy who can beat people with his own limbs does sound pretty badass.

Swamp Thing

Technically, the DC plant-humanoid has already had two movies, one helmed by Wes Craven (and a campy sequel that became a cable movie staple back in the days when no one cared about comic book movies). But SW is a fascinating character, especially during Alan Moore's career-making run of the comics back in the early '80s, when he battled monsters from hell, went to space, hung out with Constantine and wrestled with existential dread.

Hawkeye

He's the Avenger no one cares about — the dude who can just shoot arrows real good. But give the guy a chance! And no matter how silly Jeremy Renner can seem in real life (check out his weirdo app) and no matter how many franchises he fails to usurp, he's a terrific actor who may one day find the right blockbuster to helm.

Squirrel Girl

We desperately want to see more female superheroes. Plus, we also like squirrels. Hence, our inclusion of Squirrel Girl — a '90s Marvel staple whose adventures are more light-hearted than anguished. And yes, she has a giant squirrel tail and can talk to the animals.

Question

Ayn Rand isn't as cool as she was about 10 years ago, and for that we can all thank the stars. But maybe the studios can do something with comics' most Randian semihero. Created by objectivism-lover Steve Ditko in the late '60s, Question was an investigative journalist-turned-crime fighter with a blank mask who saw things in stark black and white. He was basically a psychopath, but, you know, for good. No surprise that he was the inspiration for psycho Rorschach in Alan Moore's "Watchmen."

Black Widow

Fans have been clamoring for years for a movie entirely about Scarlett Johansson's Russian-born ass-kicker — and regular movie-stealer — but so far to no avail. Maybe if MRA bros flock to "Wonder Woman" this summer, it'll actually happen. (Though the quick death of "Ghost in the Shell" has probably put a damper on ScarJo's ability to open a movie huge, despite her attempts to distract us from it.)

We've already established that here at Metro, we love "The Handmaid's Tale." It's a very thoughtful show that explores feminism, patriarchy and how a totalitarian regime is probably lurking just around the corner IRL. And it's an important show for these preapocalyptic times.

But you know what I appreciate the most in this series? The Waterfords' driver, Nick, as played by Max Minghella. He is very attractive and frankly, it is a pleasant distraction from all the bad, uncomfortable stuff going on. His and Offred's subtle flirtation is not at all a central focus of the series (at least not yet) but it is delightful to witness and frankly I would very much like more of it immediately, thank you very much.

In last week's episode, we only get a brief glimpse of him as he drives silently in the rain, low-key brooding while Offred explodes in the backseat. She bangs against the glass that separates them, screaming obscenities and venting her frustrations and — because he's just like a great listener — he simply lets her have her moment without trying to interrupt it with his words or his mansplaining. Because he cares.

In the third episode, his face gets so close to Offred's face that sexual tension bounced from my television, into my forehead and knocked me out cold. JK! But it probably could have if I wasn't lying down and half asleep already!

Max Minghella himself isn't bad either. Here's what we know about him.

He's Hollywood royalty

The 31-year-old, official name Max Giorgio Choa Minghella, is the son of Carolyn Choa, a Hong Kong-born choreographer, and the late director Anthony Minghella. He made a little movie called "The English Patient" — maybe you've heard of it?

He's been around for a bit

Minghella has appeared in a bit of everything. He starred in "The Social Network," as Divya Narendra, co-founder of

Facebook rival ConnectU. He also played Danny's little brother, Richie Castellano, in "The Mindy Project."

And he's multitasking

The British babe is set to make his directorial debut with "Teen Spirit," an emotional underdog story set in the world of pop music, starring Elle Fanning. Ooh!

He was very nearly a Mr. Mara

He dated Kate Mara for four years, so obviously there's at least one other person in the world who shares my enthusiasm for this dude.

So yeah, if we could induct Max Minghella into the Internet #boyfriend Hall of Fame, that would be very good.

McDonald's hops on craft, tech crazes with new offerings

The Golden Arches are getting upgraded in Mass.

letters@metro.us

The culinary world is obsessed with all things craft these days, and now McDonald's is getting in on the movement with its new "signature" sandwich series.

The famed fast-food joint is looking to revamp its menu to meet the needs of hungry millennials, which is why it's introducing a trio of customizable options that are a far cry from your typical Big Mac with fries order.

"The idea was to have a big, bold flavor profile," says chef Mike Lingo, of McDonald's menu innovation team. "Customers are being more adventurous."

Inspired by Tex-Mex cuisine, the pico guacamole sandwich features a combination of freshly made pico de gallo, white cheddar cheese, buttermilk ranch, lettuce and, of course, plenty of creamy guacamole. The sandwich, as well as the other new recipes, comes with a protein choice of buttermilk crispy chicken, grilled chicken or the classic quarter pounder beef patty.

Meanwhile, barbecue fans can get their fix with the sweet barbecue bacon, an offering of thick-cut applewood smoked bacon with white cheddar cheese, plus grilled and crispy onions, that's lathered in sweet barbecue sauce. Finally there's the American-style maple bacon Dijon sandwich, which also includes smoked bacon, white cheddar, lettuce and grilled onions, but topped with a sweet maple seasoning that's paired with a creamy Dijon sauce.

The "signature crafted recipes" are being rolled out at select locations nationwide, including the restaurant in Everett, and will be rotated out of the menu every four to six months (a sriracha recipe is in the works for the Boston region later this year). However, the food isn't the only thing getting upgraded at the Golden Arches.

McDonald's is also in-roducing some 21st century tech to its franchises with its user-friendly, touch screen kiosks, which will allow customers to create, customize and purchase their orders. Radar tags will be distributed as well, so servers can bring your Happy Meals and other goodies right to your table.

The kiosks have been installed at 11 restaurants around Massachusetts, with 12 more additions on their way by the end of the year.

"It's the right thing right now," says Jeff Brewster, owner of the Everett McDonald's. "We'll make a lot of customers happy, that's the main thing."

I tried IVF and it almost killed me

Author Nadine Kenney Johnstone shares the horror story that was her path to conceive.

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

"When my husband and I went to our fertility specialist and she told us that we would be good candidates for IVF, we started on the typical journey," remembers author Nadine Kenney Johnstone. But her experience would be far from typical.

In 2012, the then-28-year-old sought infertility treatment after trying naturally for almost a year. She and her husband, Jamie, were living in suburban Massachusetts, where he worked as a chef and she taught English at Framingham State University.

While many women who pursue IVF are well into their 30s, the young couple had extenuating circumstances. Jamie was a testicular-cancer survivor, and an analysis had revealed the chemotherapy treatments had compromised his sperm motility. At the same time, Johnstone, who had recently stopped taking birth control, discovered she wasn't ovulating.

Johnstone began with the egg-retrieval procedure, a standard precursor to IVF in which a woman receives hormone injections that stimulate her ovaries to release extra egg follicles, which are then harvested and inseminated in a petri dish.

But when she got home from the procedure, she felt dizzy and nauseated, with sharp pains in her abdomen. She started crying and throwing up.

Her husband rushed her to the ER, where an ultrasound of her abdomen revealed that she was bleeding internally. She went into emergency surgery.

"Unbeknownst to me, my left ovary never clotted after the retrieval," she explains. The surgeons sutured her ovary, and after a few days, she left the hospital with a 6-inch scar from her belly button down to her pubic bone, and began a painful, prolonged recovery.

Johnstone and her now 4-year-old son, Geo.

According to fertility expert Dr. Brooke Hodes-Wertz of NYU Langone, what happened to Johnstone is extremely rare. "The egg retrieval procedure is minimally invasive and there's less than a 1 percent chance of bleeding and infection," she tells us. What's more common is ovarian hyperstimulation syndrome, a condition which can occur due to an oversaturation of hormones, and can cause abdominal pain, nausea and, in severe cases, blood clots and kidney failure.

The egg-retrieval setback was only the beginning of Johnstone's troubles. While the typical next step of IVF would be to implant the fertilized embryo into her uterus, Johnstone was still very much physically — and mentally — recovering. Instead, they froze the embryos and waited six months to try again.

Six months later, things still didn't go as planned.

"In order to prepare your body for the transfer, you have to take estrogen," Johnstone says. But that gave her constant headaches, and even impaired the vision in her left eye. "We had to cancel that

The next chapter

That August, Johnstone and her husband made what would be their final appointment with a fertility specialist. "I was just so done with IVF," Johnstone remembers. "I asked the doctor, 'What else can we do?' And he just shook his head."

It turns out she was pregnant while sitting in his office, but she didn't know it. She had conceived naturally at the age of 29.

Johnstone has detailed the harrowing but ultimately hopeful experience in her memoir, "Of This Much I'm Sure," out this month on She Writes Press. The now-33-year-old lives in Chicago with her family, where she teaches English at Loyola University and Jamie works as a project manager at a corporate signage company. Their son, Geo, is now 4 years old.

She and Jamie are uncertain whether they'll have more kids. "I know I would never try IVF again," she says. "I can't go down that road again, for my own sanity."

Johnstone's biggest takeaway from the experience: realizing how important it was "to reach out and share our pain with other people and ask for comfort."

"When I was at the lowest point, I got an email from my husband's cousin Amy. She's a life coach and a doula. Her first sentences were: 'You will have a baby, of this much I am sure,'" she recalls, citing the line that inspired her book's title.

"I cannot tell you how hopeful and uplifting it was just to hear someone speak in affirmative, confident language," she says. "It gave us the hope and endurance we needed to keep going. So, speak. Speak to yourself, to other people. But whatever you do, do not keep this journey a secret."

Three months later, Johnstone tried again and was able to successfully transfer a couple embryos. "But either my body rejected them or they rejected me, and I didn't become pregnant from it," she says. (IVF varies from person to person. While some women become pregnant after the first cycle, it's not uncommon for others to require multiple cycles before conceiving.)

OLYNYK A 'DIRTY' PLAYER?

A guy named "Green" just may hate the Celtics more than any other NBA player. Warriors forward Draymond Green caught flak for trash-talking C's great Paul Pierce earlier this season, saying, "You thought you was Kobe?" in reference to Pierce's farewell tour. This week, Green went after current Celtic Kelly Olynyk.

"Kelly Olynyk is a dirty player, man," Green said on his podcast. "I don't respect guys like that. I mean, I know he's not, like, the greatest player of all time, so maybe you feel like you got to like do that, but you don't like — just dirty."

Ouch.

Green made reference to Olynyk "yanking" Cavs forward Kevin Love's shoulder out of place two years ago. It's wholly hypocritical, considering Green has come under fire for kicking dudes in the junk on several occasions.

Just another reason to root for that Warriors – Celtics Finals. Olynyk would have to yank LeBron's shoulder out of place for the C's to get there, of course, but you get what I'm saying.

SLEAZEBALL SNEAKERS

America's most obnoxious sports dad – LaVar Ball (father of potential No. 1 overall NBA Draft pick, Lonzo Ball) — is peddling sneakers that will go for the retail price of $495.

Daddy Ball defended the ridiculous price tag on Fox Sports' "The Undisputed" on Monday.

"The fact that people are losing sight — they're looking at the price tag and not understanding that Lonzo's shoe is symbolic," Ball said.

Ball didn't offer much more than that for why a friggin' athletic shoe is being sold for 500 bucks, but I would hope that the sneaks at least provide support for like a rolled ankle or something.

A decade ago I bought Stephon Marbury's sneakers, "Starburys." I thought I was being ironic (just as dumb as being symbolic, I guess).

Marbury sold the sneakers for just $15, providing a cheaper alternative to your typical Nike sneaker, which would go for around $75.

Well, I got what I paid for. I rolled my ankle big time playing pickup hoop the very first time I wore them. I was on crutches for a week.

The sneaker biz is a dirty one for sure — one in which Daddy Ball seems perfectly comfortable in.

WEIGHING IN ON ADAM JONES INCIDENT

Pedro Martinez, Curt Schilling, C.C. Sabathia and LeBron James weighed in the Fenway — Adam Jones controversy in recent days and all had different takes. Schilling basically thinks that Jones made up the story in which he was called the N-word at Fenway last week. Sabathia — the Yankees pitcher — said that Fenway Park is the only ballpark he's been called the N-word in his MLB career. LeBron James said he "can't recall ever hearing something that was racist" while playing in Boston.

And here is what Pedro had to say (via SI.com): "Fenway is a place where I feel more comfortable than any other place, more than my own house. Honestly, I could take a nap in center field and feel that I am right at home, so it shocks me a great deal that Adam Jones was called something like that at my field. I don't think that is someone who belongs at Fenway, at my field. He is not a true Bostonian."

Celtics need to figure out Wall in a hurry

Wizards star John Wall has been superb against the Celtics this series.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

Wizards guard John Wall has been in the NBA since 2010 but it's taken seven years for him to have an official coming out party in the playoffs. Wall has arrived this postseason, and so far in the Washington-Boston series, he's been more consistent than Celtics star Isaiah Thomas.

Thomas had that monster 53-point outburst in Game 2, but in Game 3 he scored just 13 points and on Sunday night in Game 4, he tallied 19. Nineteen is a good night for most, but Thomas has raised the bar on his own offensive game this season.

Meanwhile, Wall dropped 40 in Game 2, had 24 in Game 3 and 27 in Game 4. He's also had double-digit assist games in three of the four games this series. Wall was equally as impressive last round. In the Wizards' sixgame series against the Atlanta Hawks, the 26-year-old Wall averaged 29.5 points per game and 10.3 assists per game.

He has been on fire for a month now.

In this series, the Wizards have shown that they're capable of containing Thomas. Unfortunately for Celtics fans, the C's haven't shown the ability to be able to contain Wall in the four games thus far (Game 5 Wednesday night at TD Garden).

During the regular season, the Celtics had some success against Wall. In the Celtics' 117-108 win in Boston on Jan. 11 (which involved the memorable Jae Crowder-Wall finger pointing and slap session), Wall scored a season-low nine points.

The excuse emanating from Washington after that ugly performance by Wall (4-of-21 shooting) was that he was dealing with a "jammed finger" and a "sore wrist." The injury hardly affected him three nights later, though, when he dropped 25 on Philly.

Nonetheless, whatever worked for the Celtics four months ago against Wall and the Wizards is not working

John Wall is averaging 29.5 points per game this postseason. GETTY IMAGES

now. They need to find a solution and find it fast.

The C's made some great adjustments in their series against Chicago, particularly when it came to the Bulls' top scorer. In the final four games of the series (all Celtics wins), the Celtics made Jimmy Butler shoot just 29-69 from the field, including an ugly 2-for-13 from the 3-point line. Avery Bradley was given much of the credit for coming up big against Butler in

Games 3-6 of that series, and he will again have to play a critical role in stopping the opposing team's best player in this series, or else the Celtics will be on summer break by this time next week.

DIAGNOSE CTE Research Project Needs Volunteers

Chronic Traumatic Encephalopathy (CTE) is a brain disease associated with repetitive hits to the head, such as those experienced in football and other contact sports. It results in changes in thinking and memory, mood, and behavior, as well as dementia. Currently, CTE can only be diagnosed after death.

The DIAGNOSE CTE Research Project is a major study (funded by the National Institutes of Health) to develop methods of diagnosing CTE during life and to examine risk factors for the disease.

In addition to former NFL players and healthy controls, the research study is recruiting former varsity college football players.

You may eligible for this study if you:

- Are male between 45 and 74 years old
- Played 3 or more seasons of varsity football at the college level

Participation requires a 3-day extensive visit to Boston University School of Medicine.

You may qualify if you:

- Are between the ages of 18 and 80
- Have been diagnosed with IC/BPS for at least 3-months
- Consistently experience bladder pain and frequent, urgent trips to the bathroom

Aries When dealing with personal relationships, don't hold back. Share your feelings and be open about what you want to see happen.

Taurus The more you do, the better you will feel about taking on bigger and better opportunities. Strive to improve things instead of just maintaining them.

Gemini Personal progress is encouraged. Don't trust what others say or do. Make physical and personal alterations that you feel are the right way to go.

Cancer Approach your responsibilities with pride. Make an appointment or lunch date with someone who can offer you a diverse way to use your skills.

Leo An unorthodox investment will grab your attention. Consider the consequences. It isn't likely to pan out well for you due to someone's misrepresentation.

Virgo Deal with partnership concerns. Don't look for an obvious solution. Try something new that will capture the attention of the person you are trying to persuade.

Libra Consider the recent circumstances that have unfolded. Having a good understanding of what has transpired will make it easier to find a workable solution.

Scorpio Taking a creative approach to life, love and the search for happiness is encouraged. Making changes that better suit your current situation should be considered.

Sagittarius Helping someone in need is a nice gesture, but don't take control. Your honest opinion and suggestions will be sufficient. Leave time to explore your interests.

Capricorn An emotional situation will leave you feeling uncertain and confused. Take a step back and go over all the details of what's transpired before you make a move.

Aquarius Don't invest in something prematurely. An emotional issue concerning a loved one will lead to an unusual request or unexpected gift or promise.

Pisces Take care of pending legal issues so that you can get on with projects you want to pursue. An agreement will encourage you to take on more responsibilities. EUGENIA LAST
